Search Engines

The internet provides access to a wealth of information on countless topics contributed by people throughout the world. However, the internet is not a library in which all the available items are identified and can be retrieved by a single catalogue. In fact, we are known how many individual files (could be in billions) reside on the internet. Hence to conduct a search on the internet, a special search tool known as search engines is used. Search engines search a database of internet files collected by a computer program.
