Thoda Dhiyan Se (Be Careful) is a bold, satirical piece of theatre of dissent, and how it can be an aid to feminist agendas. The full hour performance is a provocative, political and theatrical statement about a body politic which chooses to believe that 'the girl was asking for it' and condone sexual assault on women. Funny and absurd, the play circumvents the 'slippery slope' of anger which often characterises feminist performance art as a man. As we close part II, the play seems set to be the first of a woman's willingness to place herself in the middle of a very important conversation. Winner of the Zurich Theatre 'Spektator Award', the short but compelling play condenses the mass gaze in a glimpse of clothing. Consequently, the play also cuts through the prejudices of the audience as well.
